

Fun, Insightful, and Professional
Team Building since 1989

Team Craft

Teamcraft.com / 888-327-5656

Eggs in Space Team Tournament Program Overview

Teams explore new frontiers in creativity in this lightly competitive and fun challenge activity.

Teams with from 8 to 12 participants design, construct, test, and launch devices to catapult eggs to a large bulls eye target on the floor or ground. Teams also develop presentations that tout their inventions using eggisms that really crack people up. The program can be conducted either indoors or outside.

Successful teamwork requires that each team develop a creative system of devices, and that they communicate effectively among sub-teams that work on different aspects of the project.

Teams earn points the closer their capsule lands to a bulls eye target , and extra points for not cracking in the process.

Highest points in the pecking order go to teams that land eggactly in the center of the target area. Other awards go to those deemed eggxemplary in collyokialisms, and eggstraordinary design.

By the end of the activity will a team have something to cluck about or will some have egg on their face? Effective teamwork will likely make the difference! A debrief discussion at the end of the activity, led by the facilitators, links winning team strategies and behaviors to effective team practices in the workplace.

Typical Schedule for the program:

Example Time Schedule: approximately 2.5 to 3 hours

15 minutes - program introduction

15 minutes - Warm-up/Ice Breaker activities – teams formed

60 to 90 minutes - construction time – test/practice time

20 to 30 minutes - Design and –Product Launch Presentations

20 to 30 minutes—Launch time

15 minutes—Awards

20 minutes Debrief time – key learning and applications to work

Awards: for eggcelence in shellected categories . . .

Teamwork medals awarded to first place team

Additional awards can be presented in several categories:

Team spirit award – Most creative Design

Eggceptional performance award: for best use of eggisms in 30 second presentations.

